

Patience Ntamane

Patience Ntamane is the Director and Head of Provincial Quality Assurance at the Gauteng Department of Health. She is a professional nurse and healthcare quality leader with more than 35 years of experience in nursing, healthcare management, clinical governance, patient safety, regulatory compliance and quality improvement.

She holds a master's degree in nursing management science and is currently a PhD candidate at the University of Johannesburg. Her additional qualifications include executive leadership, health technology management and patient safety training.

Ms Ntamane has served as Acting Chief Nursing Officer for Gauteng Province and has extensive experience in evaluating healthcare programmes, research, institutional performance and quality-improvement initiatives. She has also served on Council on Higher Education institutional audit panels and professional nursing governance structures.

Her extensive leadership and adjudication experience positions her well to contribute to the objective assessment of abstracts submitted for the HASA Conference. She is currently a serving member of the 17th South African Nursing Council and the Chairperson of the SANC Professional Conduct Committee.

BUILDING HEALTH, TOGETHER.
